NewsNet to air Conference on Web

By TONIA ANDRUS

tonia@du2.byu.edu

NewsNet (<http://newsnet.byu.edu>) will transmit live audio of the General Conference for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints worldwide in seven languages over the Internet.

NewsNet is BYU's combined news organization and includes The Daily Universe, KBYU News and the NewsNet Web site. NewsNet is the only organization offering live-conference audio over the Internet in languages other than English.

The First Presidency gave NewsNet permission Thursday to netcast the two-day session of the April 1998 LDS General Conference over the Internet.

Live audio will be available in Spanish, Mandarin, Korean, Cantonese, Portuguese, French and German. NewsNet will also provide a link to receive English audio at the KSL home page (<http://www.ksl.com>).

Saturday and Sunday morning and afternoon sessions of conference will be available at NewsNet.

A free audio plug-in link will be available at the NewsNet site to allow any computer with Internet access to receive the audio netcast.

J. Scott Johnson, NewsNet editorial director, said there was a great response to the video clips and articles of the October 1997 conference addresses offered in English on the NewsNet site last year.

"One LDS member in Japan e-mailed, thanking us for the immediate conference coverage. She said it was incredible to see and hear the general authorities just after they spoke."

"She was so grateful because the video tapes in Japanese take several months to get there, and the Ensign-magazine equivalent in Japanese covering conference also takes several months," Johnson said.

"To know we're having an impact on members around the world, that's what it is all about," Johnson said.

Conference will be broadcast via satellite from Temple Square in Salt Lake City in 16 languages. NewsNet will pick up the satellite signal, compress the audio and make seven languages available from the Web site all over the world, said NewsNet systems technology specialist Mike Buhrley, 23, a senior from Idaho Falls, Idaho, majoring in communication studies.

NewsNet expects to receive many hits to its site this weekend. During the October 1997 conference, the server shut down because so many people were trying to get onto the NewsNet site.

NewsNet has tried to prepare for more computers logging onto its site, but hasn't received a new, more powerful server

Provo lobbyists sway case for road funding

Approval of the transportation bill known as the Ice Tea reauthorization has Provo City leaders not just excited because of the money to benefit somewhere in the amount of $1.25 billion over the next five years, with $10 million earmarked for the interchange in Provo. They are excited because they played a role in getting the state and federal money.

The Council members met at time in Washington to discuss Utah congressional delegates of the Council and who went the following transportation. One of their goals was funding for phase 5 and University Ave.

Provo lobbyists in Utah were very successful in promoting their needs," said Cannon, R-Utah said. He said at University Ave. interchange and they very much appreciated the need for it.

Utah is expected to receive the rest of the I-15 interchange as some other specific projects Rep. Merrill said.

Utah may release 20,000 Iraqi POWs

Baghdad. In Iraq — Iran plans to release 20,000 Iraqi prisoners of war — but it was not until Thursday.

Iran officials have made "all the arrangements" to receive the prisoners at a border post of al-Qadisiyah, the government-contra weekly newspaper said it did not identify the source.

The release of the prisoners was immediately determined whether the release had been agreed to by Iraqi officials refused to allow the release to go to al-Qadisiyah 600 miles northeast of Cook said the money the state is getting is no more than the fair share Utah deserves. He said the state has been neglected in the past.

Cannon agrees the money is needed and is good for Utah, but he called the bill a budget buster.

"As a budget hawk I am disappointed and if I'd been there, rather than with my wife and our new baby, I would have voted against it," Cannon said.

Cook said Cannon is dead wrong about the bill. He said the bill unlocks the gas tax funds that might otherwise be used for Clinton's social programs.

Cook said that Cannon has not been "on the team" with the other Utah congressmen who have made such a good case for Utah on this issue.

For Cook it is a safety issue for the country.

"Forty thousand people are killed on highways and roads each year and 15,000 of those are related to the poor conditions of roads and highways," Cook said.

He said of those 15,000 deaths, 7,000 are children. He said the bill is vital to safe transportation.

One reason the state is receiving a high priority is the anticipation of the 2002 Winter Olympics. Cook said this does not give the state more money than it is due, but rather helps get it sooner.

Councilmember Dennis Poulsen said it also helps to have Cook on the House Transportation Committee.

Spotted frog does not make list

Groups agree to eliminate threats instead

Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt came to Utah Thursday to announce the decision of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to not add the spotted frog to the endangered-species list.

Babbitt's visit marked the end of a political and environmental controversy dealing with whether to add the spotted frog to the Federal endangered-species list.

"Our administration believes there ought to be a better way to live with God's creations," Babbitt said to the media.

Babbitt, along with a forest-service official, walked through a field of manufactured marshlands near Heber City in hopes of catching a glimpse of the spotted frog.

The Utah Reclamation and Mitigation Commission inserted man-made ponds and habitat in the field to help preserve the frog.

A conservation agreement among more than a half dozen federal and state agencies and the Goshute Indian tribe will aim to remove threats to spotted-frog populations in parts of Utah, making Federal protection of the species unnecessary, the FWS announced.

"This is a brand new idea in reclamation history," Babbitt said. "This agreement ensures development and protection for God's creations. We can create some very important riparian habitat."

Kathleen Clark, FWS interim director, said the conservation agreement indicates cooperation among state and federal groups.

"This agreement looks for opportunities to be creative in expanding the Endangered Species Act," Clark said. "We can find ways to accommodate for the growing community and help preserve the environment."

Congressman Chris Cannon, who attended the event, said placing an endangered species on the list is a major fiscal concern for most taxpayers.

"I've been very proud of Utah for maintaining two goals. First, we've been civil even when there is a disagreement, and second, after a disagreement we've come together as a community," Cannon said regard-

News Briefs

Compiled from staff and news service reports

Caned man arrested on drug charges

WINTER PARK, Fla. — The young man who was caned in Singapore four years ago for allegedly vandalizing cars has been arrested in Florida on drug charges.

Michael Fay, 22, was arrested at his apartment Tuesday by a deputy responding to neighbors' complaints about loud music.

Fay, a student at Valencia Community College, was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia and less than 20 grams of marijuana. He was released Wednesday after posting $500 bond.

"I'm not going to lie to anybody. It was my mistake. I was smoking marijuana," Fay said later.

In May 1994, Fay was flogged four strokes with a rattan cane on his bare buttocks for a vandalism conviction in Singapore, provoking outrage in this country.

Mecca pilgrims killed in bus collision

SANLIURFA, Turkey — A bus packed with Iranian pilgrims returning from Mecca collided with a fuel truck in southeastern Turkey Thursday and burst into flames, killing 33 people, the Anatolia news agency said.

The accident took place in the town of Birecik, about 500 miles southeast of the capital, Ankara. Gov. Sahabettin Harput said several gas cookers aboard the bus exploded in the crash, setting the tanker on fire.

Thirty-one Iranians and two Turks died.

The bus was returning from a pilgrimage to Islam's holy place, Mecca, Saudi Arabia. It was heading toward Iran via Syria.

Japan's economy may affect world

TOKYO — Japan's economy is near collapse, threatening the health of the global economy, the chairman of consumer electronics giant Sony Corp. said Thursday.

Norio Ohga spoke to reporters shortly after the Japanese central bank released its latest survey showing businesses are increasingly pessimistic about the state of the country's economy, the world's second largest.

"The Japanese economy is on the verge of collapsing," Ohga said. "If the economic situation continues to decline ... this will no doubt have a damaging effect on the world economy."

He urged the government to stimulate consumer demand and said that simply cutting taxes wouldn't be enough.

"Instead, we need to do away with taxes related to purchasing a home, even if only for the short term," he suggested.

President says no foreign mediators

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Accusing Western powers of meddling, Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic urged a referendum Thursday on whether foreigners should be allowed to mediate talks on the future of troubled Kosovo province.

Milosevic issued an open letter to top Serbian officials on the proposed vote. He blasted foreign powers for their "extremely negative and aggressive" demands to mediate talks with Kosovo's increasingly restive ethnic Albanian majority.

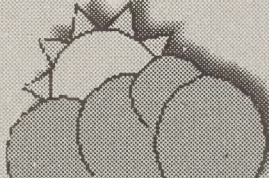

Any referendum would be highly likely to go in his favor and strengthen his stand against foreign pressure over Kosovo.

Ethnic Albanians outnumber Serbs by 9 to 1 in the southern province and increasingly are pushing for independence from Serbia, the dominant of two republics in the Yugoslav federation.

A Serb crackdown on Kosovo militants last month killed at least 80 ethnic Albanians and brought threats of sanctions from the United States and European powers. The U.N. Security Council imposed a new arms embargo on Yugoslavia this week because of the crackdown.

Scripture of the Day

"Believe in God; believe that he is, and that he created all things, both in heaven and in earth; believe that he has all wisdom, and all power, both in heaven and in earth; believe that man doth not comprehend all the things which the Lord can comprehend."

ordered to handle the higher Internet traffic.

"If you can't get on to the NewsNet site immediately, please keep on trying, and you should be able to get on," Johnson said.

NewsNet students stumbled upon the idea last year when they found the German conference signal while looking for the feed in English, said Mark Stringham, NewsNet online editor, 25, a senior from Sandy majoring in public relations.

"We researched the idea and realized we could use the satellite signal to netcast audio in other languages. Our supervisors were great to support us and let us try it. We're excited to provide a service that no one else provides on the Internet," Stringham said.

"It will be just like listening to your radio, only on your computer, but it will be President Hinckley in Mandarin, and you just can't get that on your radio," Stringham said.

"It fulfills the scriptures, saying that the word of the Lord will be heard in every tongue and will go unto all nations," Stringham said.

NewsNet staff feels the immediate language coverage will help members from across the world feel more united.

"The coverage makes the worldwide LDS community a little smaller. It's important to be able to listen to conference in your own language," Stringham said.

ing the political controversy.

Environmental groups have tried to persuade the FWS to place the frog on the endangered species list since the late 1980s, when its declining populations were discovered. They've criticized the agreement for being inadequate in scope and enforcement.

Wilmur Tanner, a herpetologist at the Monte L. Bean Life Museum, said there isn't enough research on the spotted-frog species.

Lack of research and declining populations are perfect indications a species should be protected under the endangered-species act, Tanner said.

"I don't think (the agreement) is adequate," Tanner said. "If it isn't listed, its habitat is more likely to become eroded."

Spotted frogs live in habitats including cold water ponds, streams, lakes and springs. Overall distribution of spotted frogs includes populations in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Alaska.

Huntsman awarded entrepreneur of year

The BYU Center for Entrepreneurship honored Jon Meade Huntsman as Entrepreneur of the Year on Thursday.

Huntsman is chairman and chief executive officer of Huntsman Corporation and Huntsman Chemical Corporation.

The award was created to recognize an entrepreneur who demonstrates high ethical and moral standards and who contributes his or her money to worthy causes, as well as maintaining a successful business.

Recognized as a leading philanthropist, Huntsman recently donated $100 million to establish the Huntsman Cancer Institute dedicated to finding a cure for cancer based on genetic research.

"Wealth handled appropriately is a great, great blessing," Huntsman said. "At the end of the day, revenues aren't what matter, it is the people that say they want to work for you because of your integrity and honesty."

Special recognition was also given to student entrepreneur, Vincent Musaalo, an MBA student from Uganda, for his business plan.

The goal of Musaalo's plan is to restore protein to his people in Uganda, who were weakened due to a severe drought. He worked as a janitor at BYU to save up $400 to send home to his mother and asked her to start a chicken farm.

"Uganda has 20 million people. My goal is to sell eggs to half of the population in the next 10 years," Musaalo said.

Huntsman encouraged young entrepreneurs like Musaalo to stick to their dreams.

"If you're aggressive and believe in yourself and a dream...a person who says no eventually will say yes."

Police Beat

EXPLOSION

An officer observed an explosion near the Roland A. Crabtree Technology Building at 9:40 p.m. Friday. An investigation revealed that a graduate student had ignited compressed gases with a propane torch to create an explosion. The individual explained that the project was for part of a talent show. Charges are pending for possessing and using an incinerating device.

MEDICAL CALLS

At 10 p.m. March 25, the University Police and paramedics were summoned to the Morris Center Cafeteria after a student had severely lacerated a finger. The student had apparently jumped up to grab an overhang when his ring got caught. The individual was taken to the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY

A contractor from the Wyview construction site contacted police to report that someone had broken into two large construction boxes. Nothing was missing from the boxes, but both were damaged. The case is under investigation.

THEFT

Police received a report from a student that three checks had been stolen from her backpack, two BYU payroll checks and a Utah State tax return. The 20-year-old student had left her backpack unattended for short periods of time. The checks were valued at $600.

A Sony Hi-8 video camera was stolen from 40 SFH. The camera, valued at $1,400 had been removed from a camera case in the Track Office.

POSSESSION

OF STOLEN PROPERTY

Tuesday, a man contacted police to report that he had found a bike that had been stolen from him earlier. After checking with the Police Department, officers reported that the bike had been reported in August 1997. After contacting the owner, police observed the usual unlocking the bike, arrested him for possession of property. The suspect said he chased the bike in October. In an advertisement he saw on the board in the Wilkinson Garage, information has been turned over to the Provo Police.

Future diplomats hone skills at BYU

Students defend traditional family

By CANDICE MADSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Some BYU students are using their classroom experience to lobby at U.N. conferences.

After participating in BYU's Model United Nations program, which teaches students diplomatic skills and prepares them to compete in a national mock U.N. session in New York City, law-school student Bill Perry, 25, from Sandy, lobbied at a real U.N. conference in Nairobi, Kenya.

"As a student, you do not feel the weight or seriousness like you do when you are at the real thing, but the same dynamics come into play," Perry said about his experience.

In 1996 BYU law professor Richard Wilkins attended a U.N. conference in Istanbul, which threatened to devalue the status of the family.

Wilkins said he was able to address the session and change some important language in the agenda.

"I came back with a very profound realization that the Proclamation on the Family to the World is really modern-day scripture and comes at a time when it is sorely in need. People no longer believe in the sanctity of the family," Wilkins said.

Aware of BYU's Model United Nations program, Wilkins contacted the director, Cory Leonard, about the possibility of a new organization that would involve itself in family-policy debate.

Leonard and Wilkins collaborated to create NGO Family Voice, a non-governmental organization that lobbies for traditional-family values at U.N. conferences all over the world.

NGO Family voice hosted Romanian Ambassador Pavel Suian. Suian told the MUN delegation representing Romania at nationals this weekend that determination is a key attribute of any diplomat.

After talking with Suian, Romanian student Bogdan Banu, a junior majoring in international studies, said he gained a lot of insight on how real politics and the backstage of the U.N. works.

Both Wilkins and Leonard are amazed at the success they have had but said there is an urgent need for the work to continue.

"I am convinced more and more each day that we have to reinvigorate and revitalize the world's families," Wilkins said.

U.N. competition fosters learning

By SHANDA MURRAY
shanda@du2.byu.edu
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students participated in mock United States-Arab negotiations last month.

An 18-member team traveled to Colorado to attend the National Council United States-Arab relations-model simulation. Each student represented either Saudi Arabia, Libya or Kuwait. BYU students were grouped with students from other schools into committees.

This year four of the five committees were chaired by BYU students.

"This very rarely happens, so we were prepared well this year," said Dmitri Williams, a junior from Athens, Greece, majoring in computer science.

Each committee had its own agenda, reflecting the actual policies of the country they represented, said Donna Lee Bowen, faculty adviser to the program and professor of political science at BYU.

Many BYU students gained national recognition. Dmitri Williams and Makaria Reynolds tied for the Best Chair of their committees. Shahram Pakima and Steven Bitner received the Best Delegate awards. Honorable mentions for Best Delegate went to James Fry, Sarah Smith, Melissa Jardine and Brian Bishop. Jamal Qureshi and Brian Bishop received graduate-program fellowships to the Center for Arabic Studies Abroad at the American University in Cairo, Egypt.

The competition fostered learning. "(I assumed Asia) was all one culture, but came to discover that there are many different subcultures, ideas, attitudes, people and races," Williams said.

It chronicles events from the Apollo 11's historic moon steps July 1969 to the Apollo 17's 11th lunar hop in 1969. The miniseries was produced by Kennedy Space Center and hundreds gathered in Orem to preview the fourth season of the Christmas 1968 Apollo 8.

"Most of them have been based to the point where they're kind of lost the essence of what the program was all about."

The 1995 film, "Apollo 13," starring Tom Hanks as commander Jim Lovell, told it like it was, Worden said. And now, he said, so does "From the Earth to the Moon," the brainchild of Hanks, its executive producer. The miniseries is based in part on Andrew Chaikin's 1994 book, "A Man on the Moon."

HBO and Hanks wanted authenticity and went to great lengths to achieve it. They obtained the van that transported Armstrong, Aldrin and Michael Collins to the launch pad and recovered one of the so-called white rooms from which the Apollo astronauts boarded their spaceships.

And they transformed a blimp hangar at a California military base into the six Apollo landing sites. Then the set was loaded with 3,500 tons of dirt and 2,000 tons of crushed granite to simulate the moon's gray, rocky surface. And the actors and stuntmen were hooked to large helium balloons to imitate the bounce of one-sixth gravity.

Director Tom Hanks pauses on the set of his 12-part HBO miniseries "From the Earth to the Moon." The series details the actual steps of the U.S. space program in the 1960s when man first reached the moon.

BYU's Troy Farnsworth dives back to the bag under the tag of TCU first baseman David Wallace after a pickoff attempt during the Cougars' 11-10 win over the Horned Frogs March 19 at Cougar Field. The Cougars, 18-14 this season, face off against the University of Utah today at 2 p.m.

Baseball team goes after Utes

By JOEL WHITE

joel@du2.byu.edu

Associate Sports Editor

After being swept in three straight games on the road by San Jose State last weekend, the BYU baseball team is looking to rebound at home in a three-game series that starts today against the University of Utah.

The Cougars have an 18-14 record coming in to today's game, with a 4-8 record in the Western Athletic Conference, good enough for second place in the North Division.

Coach Gary Pullins said despite the team's winning record, the Cougars are still struggling to establish consistency this season.

"We're trying to get into a winning mode, because 18-14 isn't where we want to be based on our team's talent level," Pullins said.

The Utah series should provide an opportunity to get back on a winning track, following the three losses to San Jose State.

"(Utah) is struggling right now," Pullins said. The Utes are 1-9 in league play, 11-21 overall.

Despite the Utes' record, Pullins isn't taking anything for granted, but now is the time for the Cougars to take charge, he said.

"(The North Division) has the tendency of beating each other up," Pullins said. "We've been very mediocre at times this season, but the way the division is, no one has taken charge."

Pullins will send freshman right-hander Jeremy Guthrie to the hill for the Cougars in today's game. Guthrie is 3-3 with a 6.04 earned run average this season. Saturday's scheduled starters are freshman right-hander Wesley Zlotoff (0-2, 4.57) in the first game and sophomore righty Todd Crump (5-2, 5.87) pitching the nightcap.

Despite scoring only 10 runs in the three games against San Jose State, BYU is averaging nearly nine runs a game this season. The Cougars bring a .338 team batting average into today's game, with sophomore centerfielder Troy McNaughton hitting .391 with 10 home runs and 37 runs batted in.

"We're pleased with McNaughton's play, but we're not surprised," Pullins said. "He's playing up to his abilities. Unfortunately, some of the other players aren't."

Senior Troy Farnsworth (.367, 6, 27), junior Ryan Pond (.363, 6, 30) and senior Brad Winget (.357, 4, 18) are other offensive standouts for BYU.

This weekend's series is a perfect chance for the Cougars to improve enough to start a run for the division crown, Pullins said.

"We're looking at this series against Utah as our chance to start a new season in a way," he said.

Of the Cougars' remaining 21 games this season, only six will be played on the road: a three-game series against Grand Canyon University in Phoenix

April 10 and 11, and three games against the Utes in Salt Lake and Ogden in early May.

BYU's home record during Pullins' 22-year tenure as head coach is 370-77-2. The Cougars are 5-2 at home this season, including a four-game winning streak last week.

The remaining schedule is reason enough for Pullins to be optimistic for the rest of the season.

"There's a lot of season left," he said. "We're in a really good position. It's not as if it's the first of May and we're out of the playoff picture. It's the first of April, we've got most of our remaining games here at home and we've got a good ballclub."

Today's game is scheduled for a 2 p.m. start at Cougar Field, west of the Marriott Center. Saturday's doubleheader is scheduled to start at noon.

"We're trying to get into a winning mode, because 18-14 isn't where we want to be."

Lacrosse faces Wildcats in rematch

By KAREN DUFFIN

karen@du2.byu.edu

Universe Sports Writer

If revenge is sweet, the Cougars should be watching their backs at tonight's home game against the University of Arizona.

After BYU stole the national championship from Arizona last year, both teams have eagerly anticipated tonight's rematch. Although there are no ramifications for the Cougars' ranking within their own league, the game holds significance for several reasons, not the least of which is pride.

Arizona went into last year's national championships in St. Louis ranked No. 1.

Because BYU was then ranked fourth, the two teams met in the semi-finals.

The Cougars were able to put it all together in that game, where they soundly beat Arizona 22-9. The game was physical and even embarrassing to the Arizona team that expected to leave St. Louis with the championship.

With all that still fresh on its mind, Arizona comes to Provo tonight to face the Cougar team that stole its thunder and its dream of a national championship.

The game is expected to be physical and intense.

On BYU's end, the Cougars have as much to prove as Arizona does. Because they are in different leagues, tonight's game should indicate to lacrosse fans the legitimacy of the rankings between leagues.

Arizona is No. 12 and is expected to rise in the polls after two strong wins last weekend. BYU is still ranked No. 1 in its league.

Head coach Jason Lamb said tonight's game will be watched by lacrosse fans and teams across the country due to the two team's history and well-known rivalry.

"A win tonight would show anyone and everyone that we deserve to be one of the top teams in the country," Lamb said.

As for how the two teams will match up this year, Lamb said they are pretty well matched up this year in talent and in coaching. However, he says they may have a slight advantage in the talent area.

"Because we are pretty even on talent on coaching, whether or not (the team) plays up to (its) potential is whether or not we will win the game," Lamb said.

Despite their No. 1 ranking, many of this year's players were not on last year's championship team. They came into the season with the gift of ranking. Lamb says they never lost it now.

"The kids need to earn it rightfully deserve. They can give it," Lamb said. "I think they're really working more toward the high ranking."

As they look toward the championship down the line, the Cougars need to perform well in a game to establish themselves as a force to be reckoned with.

A win will also help to raise the national ranking and ensure a good place in the championship seeding.

Because of the high stakes and the outcome of tonight's BYU matchup, the game could be the most crucial of the season.

It should be an exciting game for fans, as it has the possibility of being the most competitive game of the season. Most of the home games have come out strongly in favor of the opposing team, but have provided little substantial action.

Tonight's game should be a physical and intense matchup.

Lacrosse fans can see the action tonight on Haws Field. Admission is $3 for the general public and $5 for BYU students.

Majerus turns down job to coach for Sun Devils

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — University of Utah basketball fans breathed a collective sigh of relief Thursday after coach Rick Majerus announced he will be back next season.

Majerus, who just took the Utes to their first NCAA championship game since 1944, had been courted by Arizona State. There were reports that Majerus had been offered $1 million a year to coach the Sun Devils.

But in a nationally televised interview on ESPN Thursday night, the 50-year-old coach said he had turned ASU down.

"I wish them all the luck in the world," Majerus said. "(But) I'm staying where I'm at."

Utah athletic director Chris Hill said he was pleased, though he had not really expected Majerus would leave the Utes. Every year, he noted, the popular, successful coach has been rumored up for some other job with a professional or collegiate program.

"We're happy to keep Rick, but I don't make it much of a practice going beyond that in my comments," Hill said. "I let Rick speak for Rick in regard to these situations. That's how we've always handled it every year when these things pop up."

Hill said he has talked with Majerus earlier this week and the coach agreed that "he has a good situation. It was not like he was into getting into a bidding war ... but obviously, the type of year he had, he's going to get a salary

Men's gymnastics team heads to west regionals

By KAREN DUFFIN
karen@du2.byu.edu
Universe Sports Writer

The men's gymnastics team faces its biggest challenge this weekend as it heads to Norman, Okla., for the NCAA west regional championships.

The Cougars' competition will consist of six teams from the West, including Oklahoma, New Mexico, Air Force and the University of California-Berkeley.

Each team will participate in the team competition and has the opportunity to have individual gymnasts compete in the all-around and individual events.

The Cougars' top two gymnasts, Guard Young and Brazilian national champion Fabricio Olsson, will be competing in the all-around.

This weekend's meet is the precursor to the premiere gymnastics event of the season, the NCAA national championships, coming up April 16 through 18 in State College, Pa.

From the six teams competing, the top three teams, top three all-arounders and the top three in each event not on a qualifying team will advance to the NCAA's.

Participating in the west regionals has become a tradition for the Cougars.

This is the fifth time in the past six years that BYU has competed.

It has finished as high as third, but has put in a sixth place finish four times.

BYU has advanced to the national championship once since the program began in 1969. It competed at the NCAA meet in 1992, finishing in sixth place.

BYU will also have to face the current No. 1 team, University of California.

The Bears are favored to win the regional title. BYU will also compete against second-ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers.

The Cougars are currently ranked ninth in the nation and the region, ahead of their other West Regional competitors, tenth-ranked Oklahoma, thirteenth-ranked New Mexico and seventeenth-ranked Air Force.

BYU heads into the meet having met success at several recent meets. The Cougars set a new school record score of 228.75 in a win over Michigan State in the final home meet of the season.

BYU's all-around competitors Young and Olsson both had career bests at home in a tri-meet against New Mexico and Arizona State Feb. 7.

Last weekend's finish at the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation Championships was BYU's highest since its second-place finish in the first year of the conference in 1993. It placed third behind California and Nebraska.

Along with the third place finish, the team also brought home team titles on vault and high bar.

Head coach Mako Sakamoto said the Cougars have as good of chance as any of the teams to perform well at the meet.

"I feel confident that we can make it (to the NCAA Championships). I don't think anyone is a shoe-in — I think we're as good as anybody if we stay focused from start to finish," Sakamoto said.

The coach said the team is healthy and looking to build its confidence and compete more consistently.

Gallup shoots over two Utah defenders during the game over the Utes in the WAC tournament in Las Vegas.

Professional hoops option for Gallup

By KARI WHITTEN
kari@du2.byu.edu
Universe Sports Writer

Utah's basketball star Kari Gallup is dreaming of playing professional basketball for years. The next few months will determine if her dreams become reality. If Gallup is given an opportunity, she will help a team for various reasons. He pointed out Gallup's athletic ability, size, defensive skills and shooting range as specific traits with which she can help a team.

"I don't know how (teams) judge who gets a chance and who doesn't," Shippen said. "Sometimes players from bigger programs get the chances. But with the way the team finished the year and by her winning the three-point contest I think she opened some people's eyes."

According to Shippen, the Detroit Shock, Charlotte Sting and Utah Starzz of the WNBA have shown the most interest throughout the season. Utah attended several games, Detroit asked for Gallup to attend its free-agent camp and Charlotte has called and requested video.

Late last month Gallup defeated Utah's Julie Krommenhoek in the finals of the NCAA three-point shooting contest in San Antonio. Gallup did say it was special because people here in Utah recognized Krommenhoek as a great player who accomplished a lot in the Western Athletic Conference.

Gallup said it was nice to win, but did not think of the BYU-Utah rivalry during the competition because of her friendship with Krommenhoek. In her first 10 games with Utah, Gallup and BYU were on the losing end. That changed when BYU beat Utah in its last two games, including the WAC tournament.

Gallup was named second team All-WAC for the season and first team on the WAC's all-tournament team. Gallup broke tournament records in both three-pointers made (14) and attempted (26). She also set the tournament record with 20 free throws made, and tied the tournament record for three-pointers made in a game with six in BYU's victory over Utah.

Gallup is BYU's career leader in total three-pointers made. Gallup connected on 204 treys during her career.

"If they want someone flashy, then I'm not for them. But if they're looking for someone who can shoot the ball, then I've got a good chance."

increase."

Hill would not discuss how much Majerus makes at Utah.

Neither would Majerus, who declined to discuss the ASU $1 million offer. "I'm not going to go into that," he said.

Majerus said he had "respectfully decided to decline (ASU) and stay in Utah."

"It's tempting, it's flattering," he said of ASU's offer.

The Utes finished this season 30-4, losing to Kentucky Monday 78-69 in the NCAA title game. In 1944, Utah beat Dartmouth 42-40 in overtime to win its only crown.

Police investigate confessed killer's other hospital jobs

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Police have expanded the investigation of a hospital worker who confessed to as many as 50 mercy killings at one facility to include other hospitals that employed him.

Glendale police obtained by search warrant "a variety of records" pertaining to respiratory therapist Efen Saldivar's employment at Pacifica Hospital of the Valley in Sun Valley, Pacifica Administrator Trude Williams said.

"We have been cooperating with the police," Williams said.

She said police picked up the documents in mid-March, about two weeks before state regulators revealed that Saldivar had confessed to killing 40 to 50 terminally ill patients at Glendale Adventist Medical Center.

Police released Saldivar from custody because they had no evidence to corroborate his claims. He faces no charges.

Williams said Saldivar worked at Pacifica, a 248-bed hospital, for "less than six months" as a part-time worker who provided services on an as-needed basis.

Glendale police spokesman Sgt.

Rick Young confirmed the investigation was expanded to "other hospitals" besides Pacifica and Glendale Adventist, but he refused to say which ones.

Glendale police have said Saldivar was employed by at least two other hospitals besides Glendale Adventist and Pacifica. The others were the former Thompson Memorial Hospital, now named Vencor Hospital of Burbank, and Glendale Memorial.

Vencor spokeswoman Annette Fuglso said Thursday that Saldivar was never a Vencor employee.

"Other than acquiring the building and the property of Thompson Memorial Medical Center, Vencor Hospital Burbank has no affiliation with the previous owners," Fuglso said.

Saldivar was fired from Glendale Adventist March 13 after giving the confession and having his license suspended.

According to a police declaration, Saldivar, during his confession, was asked by a polygraph examiner March 11 "if he considered himself an angel of death. Saldivar replied yes."

Saldivar's whereabouts are unknown, and he didn't appear at a license-suspension hearing Tuesday.

Bill may give disabled inlet to file complaints

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Disabled people would have greater access to telephones, pagers and other telecommunications devices suited to their needs under a proposal that federal regulators approved Thursday.

Some 54 million Americans who are disabled could benefit from the Federal Communications Commission's proposal, which may be refined before the commission votes on a final plan, probably later this year.

The FCC's proposal would make it easier for disabled people to file complaints to the agency when they have trouble getting telecommunications equipment they can use.

Such equipment could include voice-activated phones, talking Caller ID, phones with keypads that have large buttons, phones with volume control or headsets.

A 1996 telecommunications law required the FCC to help give disabled people better access to telecommunications services and devices that suit their needs.

As the law and the FCC define telecommunications services and devices, they do not include voice mail, e-mail, Internet services and computers, FCC officials said. So the proposal, if adopted, would not make it easier for disabled people to get access to them.

The proposed rules would create a clear procedure for the FCC to handle complaints. Under the plan, the FCC would contact a company upon receiving a complaint and have five days to respond to that complaint.

The FCC's proposal would give companies lots of flexibility in resolving a complaint.

"There is no one answer to what solves the problem," said Dan Phythyon, chief of the FCC's Wireless Telecommunications Bureau.

The FCC could penalize companies that do nothing. In extreme cases, companies could be fined.

The agency has not estimated how much its proposals would cost the industry, but officials contend it wouldn't be burdensome.

Recharging laptops may cause plane fires

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A group of battery makers is urging the Federal Aviation Administration to prohibit airline passengers from recharging laptop computers, saying they may start a fire.

The concern involves electric outlets that several airlines have installed allowing flyers to recharge laptops at their seats or keep them running without draining the battery.

The outlets are found primarily in first class or business class.

In a letter this month to the FAA, a trade group that represents rechargeable battery makers said the devices can cause the batteries to become overcharged, vent pungent fumes and even catch fire.

The dangers are highest with older batteries or when a mismatch exists between the type battery and adapter.

"We would not have urged the FAA to halt this practice if we didn't feel there was a danger. Our caution is based on common sense," said Norman England, head of the Portable Rechargeable Battery Association.

The group does not oppose the use of battery-powered equipment on flights, just the use of rechargers. In addition, it said it is not aware of any dangerous incidents that have occurred because of onboard recharging.

FAA spokeswoman Kathryn Creedy said Thursday the agency is not considering a ban on the rechargers.

"The more we looked into it, we realized the service history to date makes any event highly unlikely at best," she said. "But that doesn't mean we're ignoring the issue."

Mrs. King asks for investigation

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s widow called for a national commission to investigate her husband's assassination Thursday, two days before the 30th anniversary of his slaying.

Coretta Scott King called for a meeting with President Bill Clinton to discuss possible new evidence and recent developments in the case and to ask him to initiate a new investigation.

Mrs. King said she would like to see an investigative commission with the authority to provide immunity and protection for anyone who comes forward to tell what they know about King's death.

"My family and I are still appealing for justice," Mrs. King told reporters outside her husband's crypt at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change.

The family has pushed unsuccessfully for a trial for James Earl Ray, who confessed to the killing in 1969 but later recanted.

"I am very clear that it is morally wrong to make Mr. Ray the scapegoat when he has never had a trial, and there is mounting evidence that others were involved," Mrs. King said.

Mrs. King was joined by her sons, Dexter and Martin III, and former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, who accused authorities of being reluctant to test the rifle Ray allegedly used to kill King and for failing to interview people who claim to have information pointing to a conspiracy.

"Those questions have not been faced by the people who want to close this investigation," said Young, a former Atlanta mayor and King lieutenant during the 1960s.

Last year, Dexter King visited Ray, who is serving a 99-year sentence, and said he no longer believed Ray killed his father.

President pays honor to Africans

Associated Press

GOREE ISLAND, Senegal — President Clinton Thursday closed out his 12-day tour of sub-Saharan Africa by paying homage to those who endured a dark chapter in human history — the horrid passage to slavery in a new continent.

Ultimately those slaves became American citizens, and "the long journey of African-Americans proves that the spirit can never be enslaved," Clinton said in a speech on this island, where countless Africans were shipped into enslavement.

With a large number of prominent African-Americans in his audience, Clinton pointed out that the descendants of some of those slaves became leaders of American society.

Clinton spoke with the Atlantic Ocean at his back, fresh from a tour of a former slave house on Goree Island, where he walked down the passage from which countless numbers of Africans were forced into ships for the voyage to the Americas.

"Those who survived the murderous middle passage emerged from a dark hole to find themselves, yes, Americans," he said. "But it would be a long, long time before their descendants enjoyed the full meaning of that word."

Introducing Clinton, Senegal President Abdou Diouf said all of Africa has benefited from American help.
